Sancho IV., of Castile and Leon, 1258-1295.

Castigos é documentos.

(In Bibl. de aut. esp. 1860.)

"Castigos being used to mean advice, ... and Documentos being taken in its primitive sense of instructions." — Ticknor.

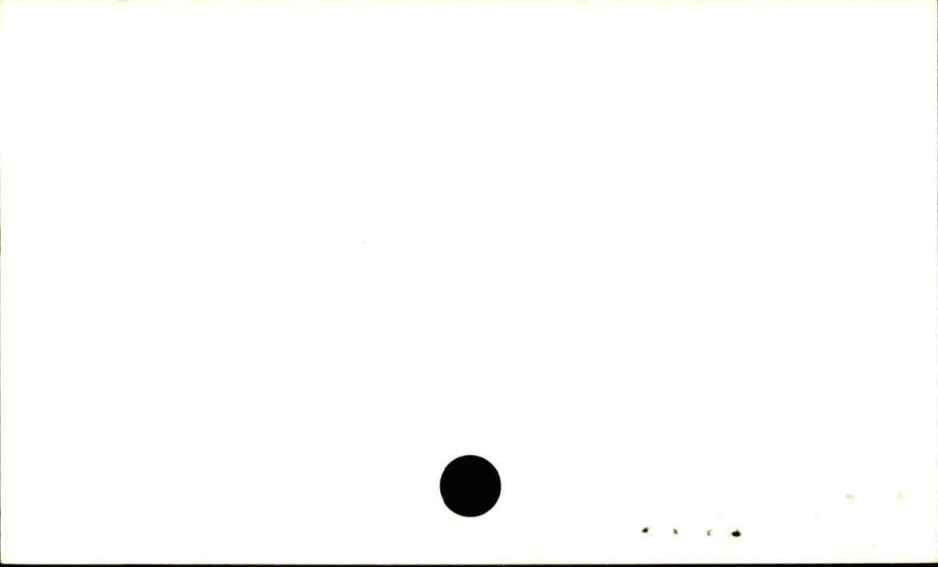

Gayangos, in the introduction to this volume, doubts whether the "Castigos y documentos," which were prepared by Sancho, or by his order, for his son Fernando, were written by him, and is inclined to attribute the work to some bishop or chaplain in the service of the king. From this opinion Amador de los Rios (iv, 35-48) strongly dissents, regarding it as without doubt by the king, and assigning to it a much higher character and importance than is allowed by Ticknor.

General, President of the U.S. of America, 1790-1800
The first of the great men of the American Revolution was George Washington, who was born on February 22, 1732 in Westmoreland County, Virginia. He was a member of the House of Burgesses, and served in the British Army during the Seven Years' War. After the war, he returned to his home and became a planter and a member of the Virginia House of Delegates. In 1773, he was elected President of the Continental Congress, and in 1789, he was elected the first President of the United States.

Washington was a man of great courage and determination. He led the Continental Army through many difficult battles, and he was instrumental in the signing of the Declaration of Independence. He was also a man of great wisdom and integrity, and he was respected by all who knew him.

Washington's leadership was essential to the success of the American Revolution. He was a man of great vision, and he was able to inspire his men to fight for the cause of liberty. He was also a man of great courage, and he was willing to risk his life for the sake of his country.

Washington's legacy is one of great honor and respect. He is remembered as one of the greatest men in American history, and his name is synonymous with leadership and courage.
